EMPLOYMENT LAW |

Friederike Winters belongs to the employment law team at Kümmerlein and has several years' experience in this area of employment and medical law. She advises and represents companies of different businesses in all aspects of the individual and collective employment law. The drafting of contracts and works agreements, the negotiation of reconciliations of interests and social plans as well as the representation before the labor courts and in conciliation boards are the main focus of Mrs. Winters' work. In addition, she supports companies and self-employed people at the interface to social security law in questions of so-called false self-employment and advises companies in the health care sector on issues of medical law, in particular such of medical product law, as well as on the structuring of medical activities.

Curriculum Vitae

Friederike Winters studied law with a special focus on employment law as well as Anglo-American law at the University of Trier. Afterwards she was granted the title Master of Laws (LL.M.) by the University Auckland, New Zealand.

Following the second legal state examination Friederike Winters worked in the employment law department of a big German corporate law firm for two years before she joined Kümmerlein in 2014.

Since 2016 she is a specialized lawyer for employment law. In 2019 she also successfully completed the theoretical part for the title specialized lawyer for medical law.

Friederike Winters speaks German and English.
